Outcome of the conference participation

Description of the outcome of the presentation of the accepted contribution, in terms of grantee's visibility, including the establishment of new contacts for future collaborations

The Language Resources and Evaluation Conference (LREC) is a highly recognised international conference attended by experts from various fields of linguistics, computer science and engineering. I successfully presented our poster Morphological Complexity of Children Narratives in Eight Languages. Although this involved online participation, the organisers ensured a platform for discussion. In fact, we had a very fruitful discussion about our research and the highest index in terms of views we received on our poster. The acknowledgment to the project was clearly evident so that the participants could see that the research was conducted within the project COST. Another outcome of attending the conference is making new contacts for future collaborations, namely a research team from the URPP Language and Space Lab at the University of Zurich. This could be a very fruitful collaboration as we would like to implement the data we collected in Croatian into the language measurement application we are currently developing. The support of the URPP lab could help us
